Political Science
Political Science

PHD IN POLITICAL SCIENCE
MASTER OF ARTS (MA)
BACHELOR OF ARTS HONOURS (BA) (HONS)

The Department of Political Science at the University of Calgary is a research-oriented department with great breadth and depth in political theory, comparative politics, international relations, and public policy. The Department is committed to fostering an intellectual community that is innovative, creative, and productive. The Department is home to a group of distinguished scholars who are engaged in cutting-edge research and teaching in a variety of fields within political science.

The Department offers a range of courses that cover the major sub-fields within political science, including political theory, comparative politics, international relations, and public policy. These courses are designed to provide students with a solid understanding of the key concepts and theories that are central to the study of politics and political science.

The Department is also home to a number of research centers and institutes, which provide opportunities for students to engage in cutting-edge research and to contribute to the development of new ideas and perspectives. These centers and institutes include the Centre for Research on Comparative Politics, the Centre for Research on Gender and Politics, and the Centre for Research on Religion and Politics.

In addition to its academic programs, the Department is also committed to fostering a vibrant research culture. The Department hosts a number of research seminars and colloquia, which provide opportunities for students and faculty to engage in lively and productive discussions of current research and to share their latest findings.

The Department is also home to a number of award-winning faculty members, who have received a wide range of national and international awards for their research and teaching. These faculty members have published extensively in leading journals, including the American Political Science Review, the Canadian Journal of Political Science, and the International Political Science Review.

The Department is also home to a number of student clubs, which provide opportunities for students to engage in a wide range of activities, including political activism, community service, and professional development. These clubs include the International Relations Club (IRC), the Political Science Association (PSA), and the Student Political Science Association (SPSA).

In conclusion, the Department of Political Science at the University of Calgary is a dynamic and vibrant academic community that is committed to fostering a culture of intellectual inquiry and innovation. The Department is home to a group of distinguished scholars who are engaged in cutting-edge research and teaching, and it is home to a range of student clubs that provide opportunities for students to engage in a wide range of activities. The Department is an excellent choice for students who are interested in pursuing a career in political science, and it is an excellent choice for students who are interested in pursuing a career in a related field.