The Department of Political Science is looking to fill the following sessional instructor position in the Political Science Program. Winter session runs from January 9th to April 12th 2019.

Winter Term 2019

POLI 455 L01: Protest, Rebellion, and Revolution (MWF 1400-1450)

A study of the origins, processes, and outcomes of peaceful and violent forms of political protest, rebellion and revolution. Cases may include historical and contemporary examples from around the world.

The application deadline is 4:00 p.m. November 9th 2018

Applicants should provide a letter specifying the course(s) and session(s) of interest, their qualifications to teach each course, and any scheduling constraints that would need to be taken into consideration.

Applicants who have taught in the Department within the past two years need not provide anything further. Other applicants should include the following with their letter:

- a current CV;
- name and contact information for 3 potential referees; and
- teaching evaluations (if available).

Doctoral students must have successfully completed their candidacy exams prior to the beginning of the term in question for their applications to be given consideration. They should also have discussed their application with their supervisor and include a letter of support from them with their application. Those who have completed the Instructional Skills Workshop at the Teaching and Learning Centre will also be given special consideration.

Applications (email applications are preferred) should be forwarded to:
